

MARINA HARRISON

Marina's passion for vintage and pre-owned pianos stems from her background in the decorative and applied arts, and her life-long love for music.

Marina completed her graduate studies at The Parsons School of Design and has written about art and the role of the collector. She has spent much of her career working with discerning buyers of vintage Steinway pianos, about which she is very knowledgeable.

Marina also frequently receives invitations to help companies develop their sales and customer experience programs and applies her high standards to her customer relations.

Marina has been singing in choirs since childhood and supports several charities that offer music lessons to underserved children. She is an avid amateur chef and enjoys developing original recipes in her kitchen, in the company of her Havanese dog.
